POT OF OIL CAUGHT

Damage Slight From Blaze at Highland Chemical Co.

A pot of oil at the plant of the Highland Chemical Company on South Pittsburgh street caught fire when an overheated stove this morning caused a little excitement.

An alarm was turned on and the fire wagon went out. The damage was slight.

HEINZ BANQUET

Was Tended to County Sunday School Superintendents at Uniontown Last Evening.

UNIONTOWN, Oct. 10.—One of the most pleasant events of the State
Sunday School Convention occurred at the United church last evening when H. J. Heinz tendered the Board of Directors of the State Association,
the State field workers and the County Association Presidents a very fine banquet. Over 100 persons accepted invitations to the banquet, which was held in the basement of the church.

Through the deaf work of the contractors the basement had been turned into a place of beauty, and an orchestra of several pieces furnished excellent music during the entire evening.

Mr. Heinz himself acted as toastmaster for the evening, and toasts were responded to by C. R. Blackell, Chairman of the directors; Vernon Faul of Sullivan county, W. W. Hartman of Gettysburg, J. F. Randolph of Waynesburg, M. E. Trotter of Grand Rapids, C. A. Oliver, the normal superintendent; Miss Hamlin of Pittsburgh, Miss Lincoln of Philadelphia, and R. P. Hopwood of Uniontown, who responded for the local committee on entertainment.

The banquet was a seven course meal, and was served by Caterer O. F.
Clark of Connellsville. The large table was U-shaped and was handsomely decorated with palms and huge bouquets of cut flowers. Covers were about 103.

About 500 delegates attending the forty-third annual convention of the association and it is expected the number will reach 700 today. The President, H. J. Heinz, presided at last night's session and also gave the President's message, responding to the greetings extended by Attorney D.
M. Hertzog of Uniontown in his address of welcome.

Heinz gave $100 for State aid.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT.

INVESTMENT.

One of Moshengahola's chief indus tries is to issue bonds for the development of its manufacturing fa cilities and asks the townpeople to subscribe for the major portion of such bonds.

There should be little risk in this investment and much good business.

The glass plant proposed to be in increased is an established industry and the investments would be rea sonably safe, while the indirect benefits are apparent.

The railroads elements of doubt in all such propositions as those set forth.

If the industry is now and unfertilized its success in both play and management depends on it being demonstrated.

It is a matter of doubt, and too frequently and unfortunately the doubt proves to be well founded. Connellsville can identify to some sad experiences in this line.

But the bonds of a tried and proven enterprise are a good investment for any town to make when the invest ment promises to materially assist in the work of making the town.

THE RED BADGE.

OF COURAGE.

In to the office of sheriff that of the chief deputy is most sought after.

The name is something and the monument is attractive to most men in modern circumstances, but the offices of both sheriff and deputy are no secure. There is always plenty to do. The life does not breed stagnation.

It is varied with experience and rich excitement. But there is plenty of a sewing machine on a $7

mortgage, to the handling of a murderer

by his wife, or to be dead, the life is a continual chapter of

and strenuous endeavor.

But the successful sheriff and his deputy never shrink from duty

however unpleasant or difficult it may appear; no matter whether related by a husky man with handy fists reinforced by an irate wife armed with all the hand kitchen utensils, supported by and aided by the children, and dogs; and the ones who prevail

all these odds and the thirty-third degree in their test for courage and patriotism.

All other qualifications are of minor importance. The office and the Red

Badge should be his.

THE LIMIT OF HUMAN INVENTION.

The inventions of modern ingenuity

are amazing the marvelous

latest "knot" of wireless telephony is the receipt of a message in Nova Scotia from the Philippines, half way around the world.

At the rate of progress we may well expect that the wit of man will not conceive of mechanical mind-read ing and that one will not be able to think without risk of being overheard

by his wife.

The meddlesome inventors be ware lest they overdo things!

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN THIS HARTJE CASE.

Decent and self-respecting people will no welcome another chapter in the Hartje case, but it seems that we are to have it without consent or con sideration.

The plaintiff alleges after discover of evidence which warrants a re opening of the case and a verdict in his favor. The evidence is purely accusatory and includes another confession from Tom Madine, the man of notorious memory.

There are also alleged letters from the two sisters of the wife threat ing to testify against her unless she makes certain money allow ances for them.

Elmer the complainant is a whole sale dealer in forged and perjuries

or the genuine portion of the Scott family are a bad lot. There seems to be no escape from one conclusion or the other. In the former trial the mass of letters offered by Hartje were virtually pronounced forged by the decision of the court. In this case Madine swore they were forged and he now says that they are genuine. The negro Hooey also "testified" that he enjoyed revelling relations with Mary Scott Hartje, but was convicted of perjury and is now in the penitentiary.

The whole case seems saturated with rotteness. It deals in rotten morals and is supported by rotten testimony. Its vile smell ascends to heaven. Such cases had better be heard in private, and the rotten details reserved to those whose duty it is, and not their pleasure, to hear them.

Railroad mergers made in violation of the law are making away since the Northern Securities decision. Senator Knox is for President. He is a good enough ally, but not a good enough politician or orator. He has no bias save his respect for the Constitution of the Fathers and the laws made in accordance therewith. He is a safe, but not a popular, candidate.

Western Pennsylvania furnishes a large share of the executive ability of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The estate fund is the only to go.

Cuba is being Americanized. The railroads are tying things up.

Hotel Man Charged With Violating Revenue Laws, Says He Can Prove Charge is Unfounded.

D. J. Johnson, proprietor of the Standard Pipe Line, was on the stand, but showed little inclination to go behind his returns as shown by the figures from the company's books. It appears that the National "Transit Company," a chief pipe line organization, served for all others in 1904 and earlier. Other companies had on hand $14,000,000. Loans were $22,000,000, but Kellogg's attorney said he might not wish to sue G. Rockfeller to explain their loss in 1904, since the Standard had been under fire since his name was made to conceal the company's enormous profits.

"S. T.," purchasing agent for New Jersey Oil Company of New Jersey, told the庭 on the stand and made a startling statement that he never heard of the millions of dollars charged to him on the books of the Standard Pipe Line owned by the Standard.

FIRE AT SEA.

Mobile Experience of Passengers and Captain an Australian Steamer for Two Days.

United Press Telegram

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The ship was in mid-ocean, the brisks of the gale and the tempests of the frightened women and children dashed to the gale that at times seemed to send the craft to the bottom, while the smoke, percolating from the burning cargo, filled the deck, cook and service to the steamer was the experience of the passengers and crew of the Austrian steamer Glutin last Thursday. They will not likely soon forget.

From 6 o'clock in the morning until the afternoon the vessel was in the greatest danger. Only superhuman efforts finally controlled and extinguished the flames. The ship landed safe to-day.

The captain explained that the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion.

HIS COURSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN.
Author of "Tillie, A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"Because—that's where I know you were last night?" The words seemed to drift from her against her will. "It appeared to puzzle over it a bit when he really was thinking what was the solution of the mystery of this ménage. To offer an explanation after having sent those girls to look for him in the north cornfield, he knew that where he would be evidently she was not quite right in her head.

Another idea occurred to him.

"Well, he said, "You wanted to give me a false scent, knowing that I prefer to keep to myself?"

It was a beautiful explanation. For a moment she half believed that was what she had sent them to the north cornfield—to protect him from the unscrupulous society of Alton. It was infinitely comforting to have him think so little of knowing her real self. There was no real reason, she could not have defined it, even to her self.

She seemed waiting to hear her conclusions or deny his surprise. But she did not speak.

"It was very kind of you," he presently added, "to want to oblige me. Her face burned hot. She had an impulse to run to him and unclose her arms about the disapproving strait. But what was the truth? Why did she wish to keep him away from the two girls?

It was her entire ignorance of life that made it so impossible for her to understand her own quite primitive actions.

"It was closer of you, too," he chided. "The north cornfield! I'd be just as likely to be at the north pole wouldn't I?"

Klara was, in fact, gratifiedly assuming that she had wished to return her favor to her in having averted her foster father's wrath upon finding her with the forbidden newspaper.

Bunice was conscious of the fact that, while in her peasant she felt unashamed of what she had done, she was throbbing with joy at having done it, for was he not here alone with her in the summer evening? She exulted merrily in her guilt.

"I would never have discovered you, capable little Bunice, of such subterfuge, went on, and she could feel no shame in his voice. "To think of those two poor girls according that I'm in search of me! And you look so harmless!"

He gave a short laugh as he put his pipe to his lips.

"We're really so glad," she wondered, at having escaped her. "The thought was followed by an apprehension which dimmed her joy of the moment.

He was so fond of being alone, her presence here must annoy him, but he had come to her. She had not intruded upon him.

"I must go indoors now," she suddenly said, her low sweet voice scarce above a whisper, as she drew back from the fence.

"Must you? Why, for me, he asked, and her hungry heart beat out a note of regret in his tone.

"I don't care if—if it doesn't annoy you for me to be here."

"I don't care if King Kong's out that something in her speech so unlike that of the rest of the family! So arrested, he said, that for an instant he did not answer her question. His silence was answer enough for her, and again she quickly stepped away from the fence.

"No—he abruptly stopped her, you don't annoy me."

He was struck with the absurdity of his telling a young woman that she should not annoy him. He saw the dimness, how her face lighted up at his words, and a quick compunction seized him.

"Poor, lonely child," he thought.

But in the same instant the realization that her sudden radiance was clouded over by her habitual pensiveness.

"It's not important enough to move her response in a low, fervent voice.

"Am I?"

He turned and looked at her. "Now, then," he asked, after an instant's weighing of it, "just what do you mean by that?"

"A kitten or a poodle would annoy you more than I, so you don't feel obliged to dodge about to say that as you do of others who are more important."

"Hello! She had found her voice; she was becoming articulate." Was that a pure response to his catch? In but two years of my childhood."

He hastened. "Papa would jaw me sompin' terrible if I told you. You just wait. Some time I'll tell you mebbe. But now," he urged, "if you've got any spunk you up and tell 'em you're goin' along with me to the circus. Ain't you will, Bunice? Out you go on!"

She attempted a clumsy excuse, but she drew back. Abe scowled angrily.

"Look at here, Bunice. You might be glad if I wanted to keep company with you."

"Why?" she asked, with a childlike wonder, while the proposition was a curious one.

"Ain't I goin' to be well fixed up?" he demanded.

"And look at the good things you could have off of me, honey girl and all."

When she did not remain to drink in at least the happiness of being asked, before he could clarify, then she was gone.

Emilia, meantime, as she sped across the orchard, was already regretting passionately that she had left him. If she did not annoy him was not that enough for her to expect? Why had she not remained to drink in at least the happiness of being asked? And what did it matter if to him her existence was as that of a fly? He was speaking to me—did I come away?"

She stopped short in her quick walk and half turned to go back. Her eyes fell upon two figures just coming into

"Can't you see it that there way?" he persisted.

"But I could not let any man sacrifice so much for me, even if I did want to marry him."

"There you go again!" he exploded indignantly. "Even if you did want me, you say! I can't let you do that! Say, I said, and I encouraged him to be hopeful. "Is it mobbed up to get you and mom down on me? But," he reasoned, "you see, all I'd be giving is for you don't weigh agin' what I'd be gettin'!"

"And, you see, I'd reason with pop and mom like this—I'd say, 'Dad, you ain't been raised to be a person. Don't forget the unmentionable acts in "An Aristocratic Tramp," seven in number, and she's used to it, work and all, and she's the one who care more'n I do married, another one where had more, but where wasn't contented not to be spendin' and gainin'! I've spoke to them arraignments to myself, still, already, when I thought of you not bringin' me any amanuensis and them same reasonings would weigh with you, mom, Bunice," he urged coaxingly.

"I do not doubt it, Abe."

"Then you'll go with to the circus?" he pleaded. "Ain't?"

"I'll take your part agin' pop and mom. Ain't you got any punk? Or don't you like cresses—or what?"

"I'm not afraid of your mother and father, though your mother's had complaints often, younger than me, but to them I'm a good boy, and I don't let them know I'm not good, but I'm not good, either."

Presently the three of them went across the orchard together toward the lane that led to the hill. Were they going to climb the hill together? The sunset view from there was very fine. It was the one spot in all the region that was dear to her, because here she could know the hours of peace and even of happiness, and the place had come to mean her home.

Georgia followed with slow, steady steps.

WILLINGER-JOHNSTON CARDS.

Popular Young Man of Town to Marry Philadelphia Girl—Fire Department Meets Tonight—Other Notes of the Mill Town.

SCOTTDALE, Oct. 10.—George B. Felgar, a prosperous young farmer of town, had the misfortune to lose a pocketbook containing over $50 in Pittsburg street Wednesday afternoon just before he intended starting home. He had been in Porter & Son's grocery, where he made some purchases, received his change and, as he thought, stuck his pocketbook in his trouser pocket. He went from there to John Laughey's office, a few doors above, and when he returned there found that his money was gone. A long search failed to bring forth the cash. Later in the day he again visited the vicinity of Elkhorn Grafton hardware store, saying that it must contain some money had been lost in the meantime. Mr. Felgar is a Scottdale man. Whether or not it is possible to find what was found remains to be seen.

W. L. Hill, who is a civil engineer, has been located in the State of Washington for some time, accompanied by his wife in her visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hill. Mr. Hill is much pleased with the Western country and says it is the place for a young man to get ahead.

Cards have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Johnston of Philadelphia or the marriage of their daughter, Henrietta, and Charles Lee, Mellingen of Scottdale, which will be solemnized at his bride's home, No. 2816 North Eleventh street, Philadelphia, October 23. Mr. Mellingen is one of the young business men of town, took a course in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and was employed for a time in John Wanamaker's store. He has been raised in the watch and jewelry business here for some time and is son of George Mellingen of Scottdale. John Van, one of the carpenters with Thompson & Hayes, the contractors, is recovering from a broken shoulder received by a ladder slipping and throwing him to the ground while he was working on a new house west of town.

Where are Calvin Collins and Andrew Ross, two 10 year old lads of town? They left their homes bound for school on Monday morning and apparently sickened from the prospect ahead of them. The truant officer has been unable to find them. At least such was the report on Wednesday afternoon.

State Policeman Gjertsen took Luigi Miracco and Giuseppe Ruspini, alleged to have stolen a number of shoes from John Marchi's shoe store in September, and who were arrested at Brownsville, to Greensburg on Wednesday, and they will be held at the coming term of court.

There was an alarm of fire shortly after noon on Wednesday, caused by a blaze in R. B. Kulin's bakery on Broad street. The fire was soon put out, and down the Second ward firemen came down with the cart truck that piece. It was a hard run for them. The firemen turn out very promptly and deserve a great deal of credit for their efficiency.

Rev. and Mrs. Archibald Auld, who were attending the Methodist Episcopal conference in Pittsburg this week, are now visiting relatives in Chestwick. They will be home on Friday. Rev. Mr. Auld announces that there will be preaching at Wesley Chapel next Sunday morning at 10:30, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at 2 and at Alverton in the evening at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Auld anticipates a very good year of his charge, an expectation which is shared by many of his people.

President W. N. Porter, through Secretary S. E. Brown, has issued a call for a special meeting of the Scottdale Volunteer Fire Company to be held in their rooms in the borough building this evening at 7:30 o'clock, when some important matters call for the presence of all the members possible.

Georgia is Having Great Time, With Bryan as Guest.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 10.—(Special)—That this is one of Georgia's banner years for the value and quality of her farm products is well evinced by the exhibits at the State Fair, which opened today. The exhibits in the agricultural department are better in quality and greater in quantity than at any former fair. The live stock, poultry and horse shows are equal to their past high standards and there is also an impressive display of Georgia manufactures.

William J. Bryan will deliver a public address Saturday.
